Highly acclaimed performer and teacher, Ben Haggerty, is offering a workshop in storytelling in central Liverpool. It will be practitioner-led and aimed at adults with a love of traditional narratives (folk tales, fairy tales and myths) and an interest or experience in performing.

Ben is one of the world's shrewdest directors of storytellers and a much sought after teacher. Very many of the storytellers working in England today have trained with, or been mentored or directed by Ben at some point in their careers. Ben is Honorary Professor of storytelling at Berlin's University of the Arts, where he teaches students of performance and is Artistic Director of the Crick Crack Club and leads their mentoring and short course programme, providing development opportunities and apprenticeships for storytellers in their early careers. Ben co-founded Beyond the Border Festival & the Company of Storytellers and is author of the much acclaimed, graphic novel 'Mezolith'. Ben also teaches librarians, educators, tour guides, gallery assistants, parents, grandparents, and all sorts of other people with a professional, semi or non-professional interest in telling stories.

£25, concessions available on request. Book early, only 16 places.
